Plasmonic nano lens for nano-imaging

Satoshi Kawata
Department of Applied Physics, Osaka University, Japan
Email: skawata@skawata.com

Abstract: Plamonic nanolens is a suggestion of unconventional imaging lens, which, instead of glass, is made of stacked arrays of silver nanorods. It is capable of producing colored and magnified images of nano-objects in visible range.